What They Learned Thru Campus Crusade* ...

Ever go to a class reunion and wish you had time to catch up with more people? Here are a few of those we've seen marry, have children and live out the love of Christ in many different cities and vocations.

"Through my involvement in Campus Crusade, I was encouraged to take steps of faith. My confidence in God grew by learning to share my faith in the student union, leading a small group in Kerr Hall or going on mission trips in the summer.

"I'd like to think that as a parent, I play a similar role with our kids. We don't want them to focus on limitations but on what God can do in and through them."

John Boudreaux is a development associate for Cancer Services of Greater Baton Rouge, LA. His wife Stephanie is an R.N. working with post-surgery recovery. They have three children who are not ready for their summer vacation to be over yet.*

"I don't remember any professors at Texas Woman's University telling me they were Christians. If anything they all seemed so anti-Christian. They would criticize my papers and challenge me about my faith because many were SO humanistic.

"If I had not had Campus Crusade staff like Sarah Pogue, who supported me in my walk with God when I was in college, who knows where I might have ended up?"

Bel Tucker (shown with her daughter and her mother) is a wife and mom to four kids in Kerrville, Texas. Her husband Karsten received a master's degree at UNT and is a family practice doctor. Both of them enjoy triathlons, and are adapting to having their oldest son being a teenager.*

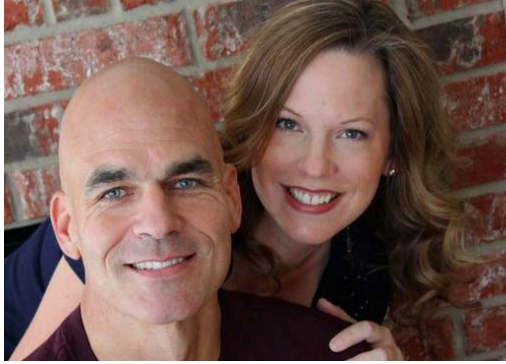

"To this day, my time as a student at North Texas has proved to be pivotal in my walk with the Lord, in providing a vital community of other believers, and in mobilizing me to fulfill the Great Commission in the contexts God has placed me."

Shea Sumlin is Campus Pastor at the Village Church in Highland Village, Texas.*

"I was new in my faith when I came to college. I learned about the importance of a personal relationship with Jesus, spiritual disciplines, evangelism to a lost world, and growing as a disciple of Christ."

Tiffany Sumlin says that motherhood is the most refining season of her life; God reminds her that life is not all about Tiffany.*

“I’m continually reminded of the valuable lessons the LORD taught me at North Texas. I lived and learned the value of discipleship and investment in other people for His glory. I continue to take with me the importance of a growing relationship with the LORD through the study of His Word.

“And I continue to pass on to others and my own children what my Bible study leader taught me: “We need to have a right and true perspective of who God is.”

Kim Macchio is the mother of two children, and also teaches pre-kindergarten. Her husband Dan, previously a Campus Crusade staff member with us here, is a K-9 officer with the Grapevine Police Force.

*Campus Crusade for Christ is now cru.

For a number of years, CCC has been considering a name change in the U.S. for greater ministry:

- We are more than just Campus with ministries to business people, churches, pro athletes, legislators and inner-city populations.
- Crusade is offensive in many parts of the world, so we already known as New Life or Vida Estudiantil, for example, in other countries.
- Our mission continues to be sharing Christ and making disciples (I Cor 1:17-25; Matt 28:18-20).

We’re honored to represent you. Thanks.

Sarah completed her 35th year with Campus Crusade for Christ/CRU. (I’m a year behind.)

Thanks for allowing us to work with students and professors on many campuses, and sharing in their stories about Christ and following Him. It’s your story, too.
